An Evening of New Hampshire Humor with Rebecca Rule

An Evening of New Hampshire Humor

With its small towns, deep woods, peculiar politics, old Yankee values and influx of new people and new ways, New Hampshire is a funny place to live. Rebecca Rule sees the humor in such typically New Hampshire adventures as a tug-of-war over a dump sticker, a stoic Yankee who finds herself in a new-age yoga class, a scandal involving the selectman's malfunctioning septic system, or a long-time resident knitting furiously at School District meeting with vengeful thoughts filling her head. Rule shares her stories and her theories about what makes this state special, with a little time for audience members to share some of their stories, too.
